

THE WHITE RIBBON BADGE

UK's leading charity engaging men and boys to end violence against women and girls. If any disclosures are made during the process, alongside your own safeguarding policy, please follow this guidance.

CHILDREN

If a child talks to you about domestic abuse, it's important to:

- Listen carefully to what they're saying
- Do not ask any leading questions
- Let them know they've done the right thing by telling you
- Tell them it's not their fault
- Tell them you'll take them seriously
- Tell them you'll only tell the people who need to know to keep them and you safe (you cannot promise not to tell the police)
- Do not confront the alleged abuser

- Make a written record immediately after the conversation with any verbatim that can be recalled
- Only share with professionals who need to be aware, confidentiality is key
- Report what the child has told you as soon as possible
- Report any immediate concerns to the police via 999
- Report any non-urgent maters via 101 or the Humberside Police Website

ADULTS

If an adult talks to you about domestic abuse, it's important to:

- Listen carefully to what they're saying
- Do not ask probing questions or investigate.
 However, establish if there are any children in the household and if so this will need to be reported to the police
- Advise the victim to keep a diary of all incidents and photographs of any injuries in a safe place away from the perpetrator
- Ask if they have a friend or family member that can support and look out for them
- Only share with professionals who need to be aware, confidentiality is key

- Advise them of local support agencies
- Make a written record immediately after the conversation with any verbatim that can be recalled
- If the victim is in immediate danger or risk, ask the victim if they are happy for you to report to the police. If they say no, encourage them to with your support and report it to the police together. If the answer is still no, then you may have to overrule that decision if there is an immediate safeguarding risk and advise them of this
- Consider 101 or online report to police if not immediate but you feel the need to report directly

SIGNPOSTING FOR VICTIMS TO SUPPORT AGENCIES

If you're experiencing domestic abuse, there are support organisations that understand your specific needs. Below you'll find a list of organisations who can assist you.
